The 3rd ASGO workshop organised in Seoul , was a resounding success. It was a two day workshop on 23rd - 24th August at the Asan Medical Center, Seoul. From the hospitality , venue organisation to the stay arrangements, everything was overseen in minute detail. I was impressed by the scientific enquiry and operative expertise of the surgeons who presented their work. Minimally invasive techniques, robotics, fertility preservation and prevention of gynaecological cancer were the key topics of discussion.

As a young doctor, I gained insight into the protocols and practice in premier Asian institutions and got an opportunity to present my work on a global platform. In addition I had the opportunity to interact with young asian doctors of other countries and exchange ideas. We could participate in clinical discussions with other oncologists on issues pertaining to standard practice and controversy.

The highlight of the conference was the medical writing workshop. It gave me an in-depth perceptive into an editor's mind and helped develop a critical viewpoint to medical literature. Overall, I have had an academically fulfilling experience and will cherish my stay in Seoul for a lifetime.
